FOCUS

Reflection on being a long term student

I have been in Utahloy for 9 years, and I really see how the school is improving throughout these 9 years. The benefit to be in a school for long term is that; you get to see how a community changes in each year, different teachers have different ways of teaching, normally you also get to know all your school mates(not only class mates because it depends on the size of our school). It's not only the community that is improving, you can make effort on developing the weakness you realize by the end of the year or term, therefore to do something and make further process in the next year. If I had any difficulties with not only studying, even daily life issues the school teachers are kind to give suggestions and support. This is a very good environment to learn and study in, people around me really gave me so much supports that a normal school would. I really like to fact that in this school we are not forced to study hard, it is more about our self-management. "You don't learn for your parents, you learn for yourself" I've been listening to this quote since I started secondary. Utahloy encourage students to enjoy learning, when you start to learn because of your own interest, you make much more progress than from any others forcing you. Maybe sometimes people struggle with subjects they find more difficulties in, but improvement prove everything. I'm really thankful to be in a school like Utahloy.
